biography

Luxembourg based artist Patrick Miranda decorates a person's darker feelings under the alias of "Pleasing". Waves of spaced out guitars, dense instrumentals and emotive lyrics create twisted rooms in between distorted walls and soft soundscapes.

In 2018, Pleasing performed at the Luxembourg newcomer festival "Screaming Fields" at Rockhal winning the "booker's choice" award. This allowed him to host the release party for his second EP titled "1 & 2" at "De Gudde Wëllen" which was a sold-out success.

In 2021, Pleasing released his long-awaited debut album "in the mood for super dark times" accompanied by three visually strong music videos, including the premiere of his last single "Sundays are supposed to feel lonely" on Kulturnews as well as extended media coverage in Luxembourg.

Pleasing's strength resides in presenting his subjective reality of coping with depression and tackling the social stigma surrounding mental health through projects such as "the moody room show" (presented by KUK KulturKanal fir Lëtzebuerg) as well as "y in you" (in collaboration with the Ligue Luxembourgeoise d'Hygiène Mentale Asbl).

His debut album "in the mood for super dark times" intended to share his struggles interweaved into his artistic vision, with the goal of creating a comfortable space for the listener to connect on the same wavelength. However, Pleasing is not going to stop the journey to connect more with listeners.

From now on, Pleasing's journey is a journey of meaning; exploring various musical genres and modes of expression.
